SUBSCRIPTION TO THE EVENING EDITION Entered at the Post-Office at New York as second-cit

THE ISSUE DRAWN.

THE EVENING WORLD Children's Bill hangs in the balance at Albany.

This measure has been urged on the one fair, clean-handed, upright manner. It has been strenuously opposed by Mr. GERRY and his Bureaucrats by lobbying methods, gross misrepresentation and outrageous appeals to prejudice.

In emphatic favor of this bill stand the Supreme Court and the leading lawyers of New York: the unanimous resolutions Republican, Tammany Hall and County Democracy organizations; numerous vinging resolutions of meetings of business men and various societies; an overwhelming public sentiment, and, behind all and more powerful than all, the principle of Justice, '!

Against these are Mr. GERRY and his formidable array of automaton Bureaucrats, misinformed as to the nature and purpose of the very measure they oppose, seeking to main tain an autocratic power in New York that would be denied them in Russia.

growing stronger and stronger in its rightcousness, shall certainly prevail at last. THE EVENTRG WORLD has fought the good fight for ten months. It will fight it for ten years, but the cause of justice shall succeed in the JUDGE BRADY STANDS BY IT.

Judge JOHN R. BRADY, of the Supreme Bench, boldly acknowledges the authorship of THE EVENING WORLD Children's Bill. He states in an authorized interview to-day that he drew it at the request of THE EVENING is riddled another absurd charge of Mr. GERRY and his Bureaucrats in their campaigr of misrepresentation against this humane and moderate measure.

The Canadian Parliament has decided that they want no more Yankee boodlers, but that they do want what they have. Like Rip Van Winkle, they are glad they know when they bave enough.

The eulogies passed by some of the Cana. dian legislators upon the boodlers as men of to any community" were decidedly rich.

It is evident that some of the thieves who left this city for the city's good are making themselves solid in their new home. It would be in the nature of a righteons retribution if Canadian politics should be inoculated by the virus of boodle methods by these gentlemen of "attainments and means. Indeed, it looks as though they had

" pull " already.

THE ALDERMEN AND THE VETO. After reading the veto of Gov. HILL of the Polo Grounds Bill, the Aldermen must feel that they are left in a sorry plight.

The Governor says that he is in hearty sympathy with the objects of the bill, but that the end desired should be gained through the Board of Aldermen, and then adds a remark quite the reverse of complimentary to the Aldermanic attitude in this matter.

He intimates clearly and unmistakably that the Aldermen who oppose the desire of the public in this particular are acting either "obstinately or corruptly." That's a pretty sharp official arraignment, but it goes to the pith of the subject. Nobody but an Alderman could rest under such an imputation.

Will the Board endeavor to clear itself of this charge? It still has an opportunity.

A WARNING.

The unsuccessful attempt of PATRICE CARsoll to commit suicide yesterday by jumping off the Brooklyn Bridge should be a warning to those contemplating the shuffling off the mortal coil via that structure that it is not a reliable route.

Instead of finding themselves after such a leap in a position to prosecute inquiries into the merits of the conflicting theories as to the future state, they are just as likely to land on Blackwell's Island.

No, there are much more comfortable routes to the Island, and a great many more expeditious and reliable means of suicide. We submit that the Brooklyn Bridge be abandoned by would-be suicides to the legitimate uses for which it was erected.

CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST.

THE EVENING WORLD offers a gold double eagle for the best love-letter containing a proposition of my addressed to the Typical American Girl. For convenience this typical young lady might be called "Miss Columbia." No letter should contain more than two hundred words. Competitors may write over a nom de plume () they so desire. Ella Wheeler Wilcox has kindly agreed to act as judge in the matter and award

In justice let me speak my soul; I love you with my whole heart. Think of the dear love you bear your mother, and of the pain its denial you bear your mother, and of the pain is defined would cause you; the dregs of sorrow are unre-quited love. You have my heart and soul in your power, do not break and condemn them, but give me yours that I may live. S. Francis Tuckes.

Sublime to the Ridiculous.

Little did I think there would ever be a woman the could awaken in me interest enough to give her more than a passing thought, and yet there is, and I am really in love, a condition entirely foreign to my nature until I met you. You, my—car Miss Columbia, possessing all the qualities of the heart, mind and body, which I, the most exacting of men, have always sought in my ideal woman, have awakened at last in me a feeling of love which I trust you may reciprocate, and in keeping with that feeling I offer you my hand, my heart, my fortune. Should you honor me by the acceptance of same, I shall at once go into training to learn those songs concomitant to a married life, such as "I've only been down to the club, love," &c.

Decidedly Conceited.

Recognizing the fact that though you are im pulsive and romantic, and possess a face, figure pulsive and romantic, and possess a face, figure and charm of manner quite irresistible, you also are practical and self-reliant. I have no hesitation in addressing you this proposal, knowing that among the many others you receive you will find none more suitable than myself to spend some of the many millions surplus which is in your treasury. Assuming the fact that there are as good fish in the sea as ever were caught, I will by no means die of grief should you refuse me, but will console myself with the thought that should you have have had common sense enough to accept me I would have overlooked your many shortcomings, with the exception of flirting.

RICHARD, LORD WALLACE,

The Voice of an Ardent Supplicant,

Oh! lovely type of womanhood, I thee. List, while I voice my prayer. E'en as I write, my love seethes o'er and floods me with a joy ecstatic. Oh! you, with charm of manner irresistible, rare facial beauty, form divine, inclose my wounded heart with fetters bountiful, and let my love for thee plead. Oh, be mine! I plead on bended knees with suppliant glance and fevered brow, for one fond word, or one sweet look from thee. Send me a token that reciprocity is but another virtue owned by thee, but one of many. Let me con them o'er. Fearless, frank and true. Good taste displayed in all you do. Patriotic to the core. Imaginative as I know you are. Fitted for any olime or station. List, oh! list to my fond wooing. Let me believe I am the hero of thy sweet romance. My love, I close, waiting, praying for an early answer to my suit, knowing if your answer will be nay, you always will remember that one fond, true heart beats with a responsive chord to all praise accorded to the Typical American Gri, of whom you are the portrayal. joy ecstatic. After Long Consideration.

In addressing a matrimonial offer to you I am simply penning thoughts which I have cherished ever since I first met you. Unwilling to trust en-tirely to a first impression, however, I have not uttirely to a first impression, however, I have not uttered the words of ferventiove and burning passion which have often risen to my lips, but, as dispassionately and as calmiy as possibly I have studied your character and disposition under a hundred trials and vexasions. Your divine patience, tender pity, gracious charity, sweet forgiveness, thopefulness in adversity, and constant cheerfulness have won my honest admiration and respect, as your beauty of face and form, and your brilliant conversation, your high spirit and unfailing self-relance liad already won my heart. I feel my utter unworthiness (as what conscientious man does not?) to experience the bils my soul craves, but dare to hope that union with the best and noblest of her type of womanhood may raise what is low in my nature and refine what is course.

Othman,

Her Happiness an Object.

Dear Miss Columbia I am emboldened to lay open to you the present state of my feelings, being so convinced of your good sense and amiable disposition that I your good sense and amiable disposition that I feel assured you will deal candidly with me in your reply. My fortune is such as to enable me to support a lady in the manner which I feel to be due to your accomplishments and position, and sincerely hope that you will think carefully over my proposal, and if you make up your mind to share my fortune and affections I trust that no efforts will be wanting on my part to insure you the happiness you so well deserve. I need scarcely say that an early answer on a matter so much connected with my future happiness will be a great favor to your devoted friend and admirer.

F. J. R.

Has a Bank Account.

Last night when I saw you I tried to tell you how I loved you. What power it was that stopped me I do not know. I made up my mind this morning to write and ask you to marry me and if you had the same affection for me as I had for you. You know my circumstances, but I think it best that I should repeat, that your parents should know it. I am now with a concern over nove year, with an income of $1,000 per year and about $4,000 in the savings bank. I know I am able to give you all the happiness and comfort you would wish for. As to my habits, no one knows them better than you. Sweet angel, the love that I have for my parents is great, but the love I have for you is different Again I ask you, can you return my love? I will call Sunday evening and hear from your loving lips your answer. My kind regards to your parents.

Who Could Resist This Plen?

You must realize that which my lips dared not say to you when I was with you an hour ago. Little woman. I love you. Love you, I believe, as man never loved woman before, with a love that is a worship of all the purity and sweetness of your womanhood, an ennoblement and elevation of my manhood's best, that is at once the idealization of passion and the resistsm of that which love should be from a true man to the woman he seeks in marriage. I am not worthy; make me so, and with the royal accolade of your acceptance create me your own knight and lifeling servitor. I am not without sin; touch me and so cleanse me. But I am the man who loves you in every fibre of his being; the man whose soul is thrilled to its deepest recesses by the glance of your yees, the sense of your presence, the gracious and perfect and passionate sweetness of you; the man who would toil, sweat, die for you, but who, most of all, would live for you to call you his. Little woman, will you be my wife? Little woman, I love you. Love you, I believe,

By Consent of the Guardian,

At last a long-cherished desire to address you s to be gratified. Your noble guardian (THE Evening World) permits me now to tell you of the love and hope that are the springs from which my life-blood takes its rise. Oh! Columbia! I love you, yes, I love you so fondly, so truly, that, were there no return, my very soul must wither with disappointment. Long ago! knew your beauties of character and person and loved you, and long have! I hoped to tell you of my love and ask for love's reward. Have! found favor in your eyes, dear young lady? Do you love me? Tell me that you do, that you will be mine forever, my darling, my wife! I beg you to tell your gnardian of this letter. If your heart is mine, the protecting care of that guardian will look to your future comfort, and I shall indeed be the happiest of mortals.

C. Jefferson. EVENING WORLD) permits me now to tell you of

Peels Ills Unworthiness

Miss Columbia: It is a serious thing for a man to lay bare be fore the woman he adores a passion that consumes him with Its intensity, therefore it is with trepidation that I beg permission to confess a love so deep that a negative feeling will cast me into a hopeless melancholy. The entrancing charms of your person, which intoxicate my senses and inspire me with the hope of possessing so heautiful a being, are supplemented with respect and admiration for those perfess jewels of heart and mind, rarely found in so exquaite a casket. To ask yout of disavow your name for mine, and trust your honor to my keeping, to allow me the sacred privilege of calling you my own, to love and cherish, honor and protect while life lasts, is a proposition of momentous gravity, and I can but feel that I sue for that which is undeserved. I have been obliged to spend more time in London than I intended. Happily my business is in a rapid state of settlement, and I shall soon hope to bask in the sunshine of my dear American girl's countenance, whose "rare beauty of face and figure and charm of manner is quite "irresistible. OVERWHELMING BARGAINS.

Icasrs. Phrich Bros. Are Selling Out Preparatory to Removal.

Preparatory to removal to their new building on Sixth avenue, between Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets, Messys, Ehrich Bros, are offering bargain at their Eighth avenue stores, which for cheapness in addition to excellence of quality, cannot be excelled in this or any other city. Messys, Ehrich Bros, intend to open their new store with an entire new stock of goods, and consequently they will not carry away a single dollar's worth of goods from their Eighth avenue stores, "even," as one of the firm facetiously said, "if we have to sell the balance of our stock at auction." There is havily any danger of that, however, as the low prices are commanting an overwhelming sale. Just look at these prices and indge for yourself. Persian trimmings, the former prices of which rauged from 25 cents to $1,25, are now selling for from 15 to 98 cents. Ladies cloaks, from a mixed cloth lacket for 97 cents, to a beaded silk wrap, silk lived, for $2,90. Shits of clothes for boys from four to twelve years, dark blue and gray flannel, for 98 cents. Then there are housefurnishing goods, carpets, fancy and men's furnishing goods, ladios' underwear and children's wear, that must be seen to be appreciated.
